

CALACT's leadership expresses its commitment to racial equity.

Like many, we find ourselves deeply distressed by recent events that highlight systemic and ongoing inequities and racial discrimination within our communities and beyond. CALACT stands against overt and covert racism. We understand that much work must be done to inhibit intolerance and injustice within ourselves and our communities. We are deeply committed to the process of learning, listening, and growing, as well as inhibiting injustice where and when possible.

As individuals committed to enhancing mobility, we believe in the freedom that transportation can provide. Freedom is the groundwork in which this country and our communities were built. Freedom cannot be and should not be premised upon the race of an individual, and this extends beyond our community of transportation networks. Freedom to move and to thrive ought to be available to all, and CALACT is committed to this ideal.

As we move forward, CALACT will work to further integrate and ensure both moral and social equity within our organization and community. We commit ourselves, as individuals and as an organization, to antiracism. This commitment will be reflected in not just our words but our actions.
